

Ex-Congressman Smallis says the negroes of South Carolina have caught the emigration fever, and are only kept from starting in great numbers for the West by their lack of money. He declares that they are "willing to live on tenpenny nails" till they can save money enough to pay their fare. In the meantime, Smallis is under conviction for felony, and spends most of his time in dodging the penitentiary. Perhaps he had better start an emigration movement on his own account.

Jeff Davis had his pocket knife sharpened the other day, and certain Republican journals immediately declared that the South was preparing for a new rebellion.

If men throw mud at you, let it dry and then throw it off.—Spurgeon.
